PAUL HAMBORSZKY

Formerly pastor of the Hungarian Reformed Church in New Brunswick.

Claims that Mr. Hall, while with him on train bound for New York, told him of his relationship with Mrs. Mills and that he feared Henry Stevens; also that he was contemplating a divorce from Mrs. Hall and in this connection was considering the divorce laws of various states.

Hamborszky sought the affiliation of his church with the Episcopal Diocese and it is believed came to know Mr. Hall while working for this affiliation. Bishop Matthews and others state that he was extremely intemperate. This intemperance resulted in his being carried from the pulpit on one occasion. There is also talk of his financial irregularities while the pastor of his church. Bishop Matthews states he settled for some of Hamborszky's debts with a member of his congregation.

He is at present engaged in real-estate in New York City and is said to have frequented a place known as a gambling house while in New Brunswick.
